2010 Annual Meeting
Friday, March 26 through Sunday, March 28
 AMWA will again team up with the Institute for Women's Health for the 2010 meeting, held at The Crystal Gateway Marriott in Crystal City, VA.

Marilyn Clements, Coordinator of Healthcare-NOW!, passed away on Monday, August 3.

Marilyn's life and work was dedicated to social justice. She worked tirelessly to build, speak, and spread the word about meaningful civil rights and healthcare reform. Her leadership, vision, and passion helped to strengthen the recognition of healthcare as a human right throughout the nation.

Marilyn led a rich, decades-long career in social justice activism, including civil rights, women's rights, human rights, and peace. Ms. Clements worked with Martin Luther King, Jr. to expand black voting rights in the 60's. She settled in Atlanta to join the Southern Christian Leadership Conference led by King. In addition to this organization, she worked with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the Center for Constitutional Rights, the United Methodist Church, and the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization, among other organizations.

Marilyn served as the National Coordinator for Healthcare-NOW until her death. Doctors diagnosed her with multiple myeloma in June of 2008, and Marilyn had to step back from her leadership role at Healthcare-NOW to undergo extensive and painful treatments. A tribute to her organizing skills, a group of nine committed activists responded to her call, and stepped up to form a Steering Committee to assume leadership during her illness.

At the June 7, 2009 event at Judson Memorial Church, Marilyn's consistent optimism rang loud and clear as she remarked to the crowd, "We are on the verge of winning something that is so desperately needed for all of our people... Love to all of you. Keep up the fight... And we are going to win single-payer healthcare."

Preparation for AMWA Day on the Hill 2010

An important part of AMWA's advocacy activities is to ensure that women's specific needs and the challenges are addressed within the health care system. The National Women's Law Center whose work focuses on women's health and health care coverage has a great advocacy and lobbying resource called the Reform Matters Toolkit. This Toolkit provides the resources women's advocates need to be full participants in the health care reform movement and policy debates at the state and national levels. The toolkit explores various health care reform proposals and their impact on women's access to comprehensive, affordable, quality care.

Make your voices heard in health reform and other legislative matters. Join us Thursday March 26, 2010 for Advocacy Day immediately before the Women's Health Congress/ 95th year Anniversary AMWA Meeting. There will be a panel discussion in the morning and we will meet with our Legislators and/or their Health Legislative Assistants in the afternoon. If you are interested please RSVP to LWatersMD@yahoo.com.

Medpedia.com

In order to raise the professional profiles of our members, facilitate group dialogue and increase the networking potential of the AMWA, we've joined Medpedia, the new technology platform for the global health community.

Medpedia is a long-term project, launched last week that includes three features: a collaborative knowledge base, a professional network and directory for health professionals and organizations, and communities of interest in which medical professionals and non-professionals can share information about conditions, treatments and lifestyle choices.

By joining Medpedia, physicians and PhDs will have the opportunity to create and edit medical articles, or opt to oversee content on a specialized topic and receive credit for it. Each member of our group can set up their own professional profile, viewable by the public, and participate in the AMWA discussion forum. We hope that this will open dialogue within our organization, and that you'll post questions or comments to the community on Medpedia.

Follow this link to join the group: <http://www.medpedia.com/groups/99-AMWA>

FLASH!!! REPORT FROM THE WOMEN'S HEALTH WORKING GROUP

After nearly 16 months of meetings, conference calls, reports, investigations, and determination, the AMWA Women's Health Working Group is ready to launch the Women's Health Digital Resource Library (WHDRL) on the Medpedia website.

Wendy Taylor, one of the founders of Medpedia, has been working with our group to facilitate construction of the library. The materials we have posted so far can be found on the Medpedia.com website under the AMWA page under "Organizations". Go to: <http://www.medpedia.com/groups/99>. Take a quick look at it today, and then determine what materials you can create, or that you may have ready to place onto the site.

Under the Wikipedia concept, any materials can be placed on the site, and you may designate yourself as the lead author. Other MDs or PhDs can make changes to the materials, but you can ask to be notified of those changes if you become a follower of the article. If you disagree with the change, you can make corrections. In the future, we will have a board of peer reviewers, and you may ask that your materials be peer-reviewed.

Medpedia is fast becoming a popular site visited and used by medical students, so this will be a way to share your unique Women's Health knowledge with a large community of professionals. The articles posted at this point are a set of one page case presentations which were edited by the American College of Women's Health Physicians to discuss management of Women's Health Issues through a sex- and gender-specific lens.

AMWA and ACWHP have entered into a partnership that will fund a part-time coordinator for the project for the first year, and the job description for this position follows:

AMWA/ACWHP JOINT VENTURE: WEB-BASED WOMEN'S HEALTH DIGITAL RESOURCE LIBRARY PROJECT

SEEKING: Innovative, outgoing, friendly and progressive person with some online publishing and Internet community experience to coordinate, organize, direct, and manage a Web-based Women's Health Resource Library (WHDRL) which will inform the medical community in evidence-based, high quality, gender-specific care of women.

For many years, the American Medical Women's Association and the American College of Women's Health Physicians have been working to produce gender specific teaching and learning resources and Women's Health curricula, and they have now formed a partnership with www.Medpedia.com with the objective of placing these materials on the Web and making them available to all in the medical community who have an interest in translating gender specific research to clinical practice. All interested teachers, students, and clinicians will be invited to donate to appropriate resources which they have created or discovered.

We are looking for a responsible and deeply committed "people-person" to work with the Medpedia editors and volunteer editors to manage and grow the project.

Responsibilities include:

1. Finding and recruiting potential writers, educators, and editors who will contribute to the project by identifying, writing, editing, or donating materials to be posted on the digital library.
2. Coaching those volunteers and making their contributions simple to post and use.
3. Working closely with the Medpedia staff to organize and place these materials on the site.
4. Willing to travel occasionally to inform schools and educators of the project and facilitate its growth and use.
Strong writing and communication skills are a must; some editing skills required.
5. We envision that this will be a 1/2 time position for one year, with continuation contingent upon funding. The coordinator will be hired as an independent contractor, working off-site with minimal supervision.

Policy, Legislation & Oversight

Health Care Reform and You

With all the news about health care reform and the bills being drafted and moved through Congress, it's hard to keep straight what the goal is. For those who already have health insurance, many are wondering what they stand to gain from new legislation, while those without insurance and wondering if they'll be forced to pay money they can't afford to insure themselves and their families. While there is nothing concrete yet, the mostly agreed upon basics are:

- All Americans will be required to carry health insurance or pay a penalty
- All but the smallest business will be required to provide and subsidize insurance for their workers, or pay a penalty for failing to do so
- Medicaid will be expanded to help low-income Americans get health insurance coverage
- Insurance companies will be more tightly regulated
- A "health insurance exchange" will be created, and to participate in it insurance companies will have to agree to provide a specified level of benefits, and will set premiums at rates comparable to group rates for big employers, rather than exorbitant individual rates

Congress estimates that it will cost about $1 trillion over 10 years to extend coverage to the tens of millions currently uninsured Americans. Some Americans will most likely end up paying less, while others will pay more, especially in taxes. While the details are still being hammered out, universal health care coverage does appear to be the way of the future in America.

August 06, 2009- Center Applauds Senate's Vote to Confirm Sotomayor as 'Defining Moment'

The U.S. Senate confirmed Judge Sonia Sotomayor to be the next Associate Justice on the Supreme Court today. A statement from Marcia D. Greenberger, Co-President of the National Women's Law Center, follows:

"Today's Senate vote marks a defining moment in the history of our nation's highest court. The confirmation of the first Latina and woman of color, and only the third woman, to sit on the Supreme Court means the bench will now better reflect the rich diversity of our country. More on this story.

Ovary Removal Linked to Increased Lung Cancer Risk

Women who have hysterectomies often have both of their ovaries removed along with their uterus, as to prevent ovarian cancer in the future. However, new research shows that ovary removal may raise the risk of developing lung cancer. This finding was stumbled upon accidentally, while researchers were investigating the relationship between lung cancer and hormones in women. While no relationships between hormonal factors like menstruation patterns, child-bearing, or breast-feeding histories and the risk of lung cancer were uncovered, researchers did find that women whose menopause had been medically induced had a 1.92 greater risk of developing lung cancer than women who experienced natural menopause. Most women who had a medically induced menopause had had both ovaries removed. Surgical menopause results in a sudden drop in estrogen levels, which researchers are theorizing contributes to an elevated risk of lung cancer. It was not all bad news though: women who have both ovaries removed are less likely to develop breast cancer and have virtually no risk for ovarian cancer.

Large Study Points to the Brain Benefits of Eating Fish

Prior research had already established a link between a diet rich with fish and heart health, but now people have another reason to eat more fish—a lower risk of dementia. New research shows that the more fish study participants ate, the lower their risk for dementia was. The study included more than 15,000 participants age 65 and older living in China, India, Cuba, Venezuela, Mexico, Peru, and the Dominican Republic. Study participants who ate fish nearly every day were found to be almost 20% less likely to develop dementia than those who ate fish just a few times a week, and those who ate fish a few times a week were almost 20% less likely to develop dementia than those who ate no fish at all. Observational studies in the West have noted a similar finding, but no randomized, controlled clinical trials of this nature have been conducted yet. Other research shows that red meat has the exact opposite effect on the brain, raising an individual's risk of developing dementia.

Call for Submissions: "Accidental Crusader" for Equal Rights- Dr. Linda Brodsky Launches Multi-Author Book Project

Dr. Linda Brodsky, one of the most respected names in pediatric otolaryngology and Quality Assurance in Healthcare, is launching a multi-author book project to be published early in 2010. Linda, who has been awarded the Association of Women "Distinguished Member Award" and the Sylvan Stool Award for Teaching and Service, is looking for stories about how the challenges facing women physicians, surgeons, and healthcare workers affect the way healthcare is delivered in our country. The project was conceived after the conclusion of Linda's nearly ten year legal battle based on her claims of gender discrimination in the hospital and university in which she worked. Instead of shrinking into the role of a gender discrimination victim, Linda instead became an advocate for equal rights, and is now out to help others tell their 2 stories. Though Linda continues her work as one of the country's top otolaryngologists, her "accidental crusade" for gender equality in healthcare has come to define a big part of her life's mission. The book project comes on the heels of the successful launch of Linda's site, www.LindaBrodskyMD.com, and her blog, <http://thebrodskyblog.com>. For more information on the project or to submit your story, please visit the website.
