Repeal, Replace, Revise? What Healthcare Could Look Like Under the New White House Administration

The change in administration will likely bring drastic policy changes to the Affordable Care Act. Hospitals are concerned about the potential loss of patients, and payers are exploring operating models that improve quality and lower costs. Pharmaceutical companies are navigating the implications of regulatory changes that impact how they bring life-saving products to market. What will the future of health care hold? Join WIB-Chicago on January 24th for a panel discussion with industry experts that will discuss possible near-term policy adjustments and implications for patients.
