

The NIH Office of Research on Women's Health Presents:

3rd Annual NIH Vivian W. Pinn Symposium

“Leveraging the Network to Advance Women in Science”

Plus a Professional Development and Networking Session:
*Catalytic Connections

May 16, 2018

1:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.

NIH Main Campus, National Library of Medicine, Lister Hill Center Auditorium

Join us for an exciting afternoon for our Third Annual NIH Vivian W. Pinn Symposium, “Leveraging the Network to Advance Women in Science.” You will hear distinguished speakers and, learn about their experiences and insights on mentoring women and charting women’s career progression.

A professional development and networking event will follow. Invited speakers and guests will have the opportunity to meet current and future mentors as well as aspiring scientists at the Catalytic Connections session.

Panel Moderator:

Janet Bandows Koster, M.B.A.
Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer
Association for Women in Science

Speakers:

NIH Community Speaker Address

P. Kay Lund, Ph.D.

Director, Division of Biomedical Research Workforce, Office of Extramural Research
NIH Co-chair, NIH Working Group on Strengthening the Biomedical Workforce

Academic Community Speaker Address

Daniel Ford, M.D., M.P.H.

Principal Investigator and Director, BIRCWH Program, Johns Hopkins University
Director, Johns Hopkins Institute for Clinical and Translational Research
Vice Dean for Clinical Investigation
Professor of Medicine

Women in STEM Speaker Address

Rachelle Heller, Ph.D.

Associate Provost and Professor of Computer Science
The George Washington University School of Engineering & Applied Science

To register online click here or go to <https://orwh.od.nih.gov/annual-vpinn-seminar/register>.

On-site registration will also be available.

If you have questions, please email ORWHinfo@mail.nih.gov or visit nih.gov/women for more information.