American Medical Women's Association Newsflash

June 3, 2020

AMWA releases a statement calling upon the healthcare community to stand against hate, violence, and systemic racism.

AMWA stands united against hatred, violence, and systemic racism in our communities. This statement was previously posted to our social media platforms and on our website.

We are working to build an antiracism curriculum and culture that will be embedded in our work. We encourage you to reach out to them if they can support you in any way. Dr. Sandhu’s contact information is attached.

AMWA partners with BossB MD to study why women leave medicine and for more information about this and other opportunities.

AMWA recently partnered with BossB, MD for a series of webinars on uncertainty and market volatility. Sign up to watch them here.

So You Want To Talk About Race? by Ijeoma Oluo. Please read the book by June 21 and discuss it in a book club-type forum, date and time to be determined.

We are working to build an antiracism curriculum and culture that will be embedded in our work.

Dr. Nicole Sandhu and your Division leaders (for medical and premedical students) have set up a dedicated email for more information about this and other opportunities.
