- THE AMWA OPIOID ADDICTION IN WOMEN TASK FORCE
Who we are:
A subdivision of AMWA who focuses on education, research, and policy as it relates to sex and gender differences in opioid prescription, use, and outcomes. Current members include medical students, MPH candidates, as well as neonatologists, orthopedic surgeons, and endocrinologists. The task force's faculty Co-Chairs include Dr. Kim Templeton, MD and Dr. Connie-Newman, both past presidents of AMWA!

We are currently looking for enthusiastic individuals to join our 3 subcommittees. Descriptions of ongoing and future subcommittee projects are included below:
1) Opioids in pregnancy and new mothers - Create patient-facing pamphlets in English and Spanish to educate pregnant women and moms about Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome, resources, and ways to prevent it. Seek out distribution methods with various physician organizations (ACOG, AAFP, etc.), national organizations, and other social media outlets to increase patient awareness.
2) Naloxone Use and Education - Develop training videos, infographics, and other educational materials for lay people to use Naloxone. Future projects include adaptations for adolescents and Spanish speaking patients.
3) Intersection of Opioid Use and Race - Perform literature review and analysis in order to develop content for presentation and educational materials to post on AMWA social media.
